Mr. Williams in Montgomery.

[Special Dispatch to the Baltimore Sun.]

ROCKVILLE, MD., Oct. 10.—The Rockville Opera House was crowded to its doors last night at the opening of the democratic congressional campaign in Montgomery county. Treasurer Spencer C. Jones presided. Ferdinand Williams, the candidate for Congress, made a speech, in which he said that the platform upon which he stood was the same as that framed at Chicago, when Grover Cleveland was nominated for President, and which Mr. William L. Wilson was striving to follow when he framed the tariff bill. He was bitterly opposed to the trusts, monopolies, corporations, and the moneyed few in whose interest the McKinley bill was made and passed. He paid a high tribute to President Cleveland and Mr. Wilson. At the mention of these names great enthusiasm was shown. Mr. Williams referred to the many industries which have revived since the passage of the tariff bill. He scouted the idea that the hard times were caused by a democratic administration, and declared the state of the country to be due to thirty years of republican rule. He complimented "Old Montgomery" on its past democratic majorities, and appealed to the citizens to make this year's majority eclipse all previous records.

Congressman Wm. M. McKaig also spoke and Harry E. Davis, of Washington, addressed the meeting.
